

Dear Claire,

I could do with some words of wisdom from you please. Our fence that forms part of the playing field boundary has some elder trees growing along it - mixed in with the greengages & threatening to overcome them in one instance. They also grow over the fence and cause quite a bit of shading in the garden. I will attach a photo taken from the playing field.

I am happy to pay to have these elders removed and replace one of them with either another greengage or a buddleia or whatever was deemed best at the site. Is this something I need permission from the school to do, or is it a PC matter? If I get the go-ahead I was planning on getting the work done either late September or early October, probably using Shire's. I'll try & get the ivy under control too!

Many thanks,
